

Document is prepared based on professional judgement and what majority students reported to me after exam.

What was tested?

- Section A: Adjusted Present Value, Interest rate collar and swap were the main components
- Section B: One of the two questions was about ratios and commentary. The other one focused on mergers and acquisitions with focus on different forms of considerations

Difficulty level?

- Section A: Very difficult
- Section B: Moderate to easy

Were similar questions available in past paper?

- Section A:
 - Concept: Yes
 - Content: No
 - It was a fairly difficult to handle question
- Section B:
 - Concept: yes
 - Content: Yes
 - Both the questions were similar to previous past paper questions

Were students able to handle it?

- Those who started with Section B and did past papers properly were very confident. They just had last struggling hour with Section A but managed to do above average – expected to pass
- Those who started with Section B and did not do sufficient past papers were not very much confident. They struggled to recall some concepts in Section B and hence they also struggled with Section A due to pressure – expected to pass provided they attempted at least 80-90 marks
- Those who started with Section A were least confident – expected to pass if they moved on within a reasonable time to Section B and provided they did proper past papers

Key lessons

- There are always easy marks in the exam. Start with the easiest question.
- Strong grip on past papers means that you can get the easy marks first and make sure that you pass
- There is always going to be some area where you will struggle or a unique type of question
- Those who were less confident also reported issue of time management. Always give mocks and assignments on time to your instructor for checking and while doing them note the time.

Future action?

- September 2023 students who are going to appear in coming week due to technical issues do a lot of past papers several times and follow above key lessons
- December 2023 new students learn from key lessons and start as early as today. Consult me for portal access. Be very much available for all weekly live sessions, submit assignments, homework and mocks for checking all the time.
- Those who are not very confident of passing September 2023 start as early as possible. Follow the course planner. Be very much available for all weekly live sessions, submit assignments, homework and mocks for checking all the time
