

Buy put option

1. you are buyer of the option not the seller of the option
2. you have paid premium as you bought the option, not received
3. you have the option which if you want you can exercise, not the counter party
4. put is an option to sell, not an option to buy something
5. if you want you can put/sell the underlying product at your discretion on agreed exercise or strike price
6. the counter-party will have to buy it, if you want to sell the underlying product they cannot say no to you (this is what you paid premium for)

Buy call option

1. you are buyer of the option not the seller of the option
2. you have paid premium as you bought the option, not received
3. you have the option which if you want you can exercise, not the counter party
4. call is an option to buy, not an option to sell something
5. if you want you can call/buy the underlying product at your discretion on agreed exercise or strike price
6. the counter-party will have to sell it, if you want to buy the underlying product they cannot say no to you (this is what you paid premium for)

Sell put option

1. you are the seller of the option not the buyer of the option
2. you have received premium as you sold the option, not paid
3. counter party have the option which if they want they can exercise, not you
4. put is an option to sell, not an option to buy something
5. if the counter party wants they can put/sell the underlying product at their discretion on agreed exercise or strike price
6. you will have to buy it, if counterparty wants to sell the underlying product you cannot say no to them (this is what you received premium for)

Sell call option

1. you are the seller of the option not the buyer of the option
2. you have received premium as you sold the option, not paid

3. counter party have the option which if they want they can exercise, not you
4. call is an option to buy, not an option to sell something
5. if the counter party wants they can call/buy the underlying product at their discretion on agreed exercise or strike price
6. you will have to have to sell it, if counterparty wants to buy the underlying product you cannot say no to them (this is what you received premium for)

AFM AT VIFHE.COM BY TAHA POPATIA

+923453086312