Passage 1:

Meetings can waste a great deal of time. But you can make your meeting run more smoothly by following a few simple rules. First, have an agenda. This will help keep you focused on what is important. Next, decide who needs to be involved. More people means less efficient discussion. Finally, keep the discussion moving. Thank each speaker as he or she finishes and move on to the next speaker. This encourages people to make their remarks brief. And don't forget: What happens after a meeting is more important than what happens during the meeting. The skills used then are more professional and less procedural. So no matter how well you run a meeting, it is the work that gets done after the meeting that is important.

Hotels are changing their wasteful habits and getting involved in the move to save the environment. At major hotels throughout the world, guests are greeted by shampoo and mouthwash in glass dispensers instead of elaborate plastic bottles.

The green movement is becoming increasingly popular among tourists who look for service providers with an environment conscience. The business of eco-tours is increasing rapidly. Travel agents are booking clients on "Save the Rainforest" expeditions and similar trips where the emphasis is on protecting the world.

The tourists on these trips are given lectures on the effects of the loss of our planet's natural wonders and what they can do to reverse the trend. They do not need much convincing. The travelers on these excursions are already committed to environmental protection.
